

A Dialogue between Two Friends about Poverty in India

Description

A Conversation between Two Friends about Poverty in India

Sahan: How are you doing Pallab?

Pallab: I am good bro, what about you?

Sahan: I am fine too. So what are you doing nowadays?

Pallab: Nothing special. There is a thing bothering me a lot for a week.

Sahan: What's that?

Pallab: That's about poverty in India. I found a report saying India is one of the biggest countries having the largest number of poor people in the world.

Sahan: Yes, this is true. I know about that. I have seen lots of Television reports and Newspaper reports on this topic.

Pallab: What do you think about that? Why we are facing that much poverty in our country?

Sahan: There are so many reasons Pallab. The first reason is overpopulation. I always consider this a huge problem for the country. Every government we elect, they failed to create enough working opportunities for the nation.

Pallab: Yes, you are right. Isn't there something that we can do for poor people?

Sahan: Yes, we can do lots of things. There are lots of ways of helping them. I think we can work to create job opportunities for them.

Pallab: You are right if a person has a job and a decent earning his life will change.

Sahan: Poverty is the biggest reason behind the most crimes in the country. Poverty leads young and kids to commit crimes. It makes a direct impact on the nation's face.

Pallab: Yeah, you are right. By fixing this problem, we can get rid of lots of problems.

Sahan: Yes exactly. Now we all need to help the poor people.

Pallab: I will try my best and I will tell everyone else. And I hope the good politicians will lead us to become a good nation, free of corruption.
