Essay on Advantages and Disadvantages of Internet in 500 Words

Introduction:

The Internet is like a blessing to us. It has made our life easy and simple. There are tons of good sides to the internet and it is a huge reason to change the world. Things have been easy and under control. Here we are talking about some advantages and some disadvantages of the internet.

Advantages of the Internet:

The biggest advantage of the internet is communication. Now people can contact each other effortlessly without too much hassle. It has been cheap too. One upon a time it was impossible to talk to someone overseas. Now you can just find him on any internet chat and contact for free.

The service has opened opportunities to make business internationally. If you want to get customers and clients from another part of the world, you can do that. The education system has been so developed. Now students can do all their studies and homework on a website or mobile app with an internet connection.

Video streaming sites like YouTube have many resources to study. Whatever you want to learn, you can learn that on Udemy. People can search for information and can get them for free. The Internet is an open source for all. Anybody can access all the data. Now people are using mobile banking a lot.

It has been very simple to send and receive money with the mobile banking system. It works through the internet. People can buy their desired products online. They can check the product properly, and can compare the price with different other shops. If someone wants to sell anything it also has been so easy.

Disadvantages of the Internet:

With so many good sides, there are a few bad sides to the internet too. First of all, you can lose your data anytime with any deadly hacker. Data security is a huge issue. That's why we have to avoid pirated software and need to use reliable services. Social media platforms are the biggest part of the internet industry.

Cyberbullying is a common problem there. Some people harass other peoples. The Internet is very addictive and that's why most young people get addicted to it. It becomes so hard to take them away from it. Most of the time they get addicted to porn or video games.

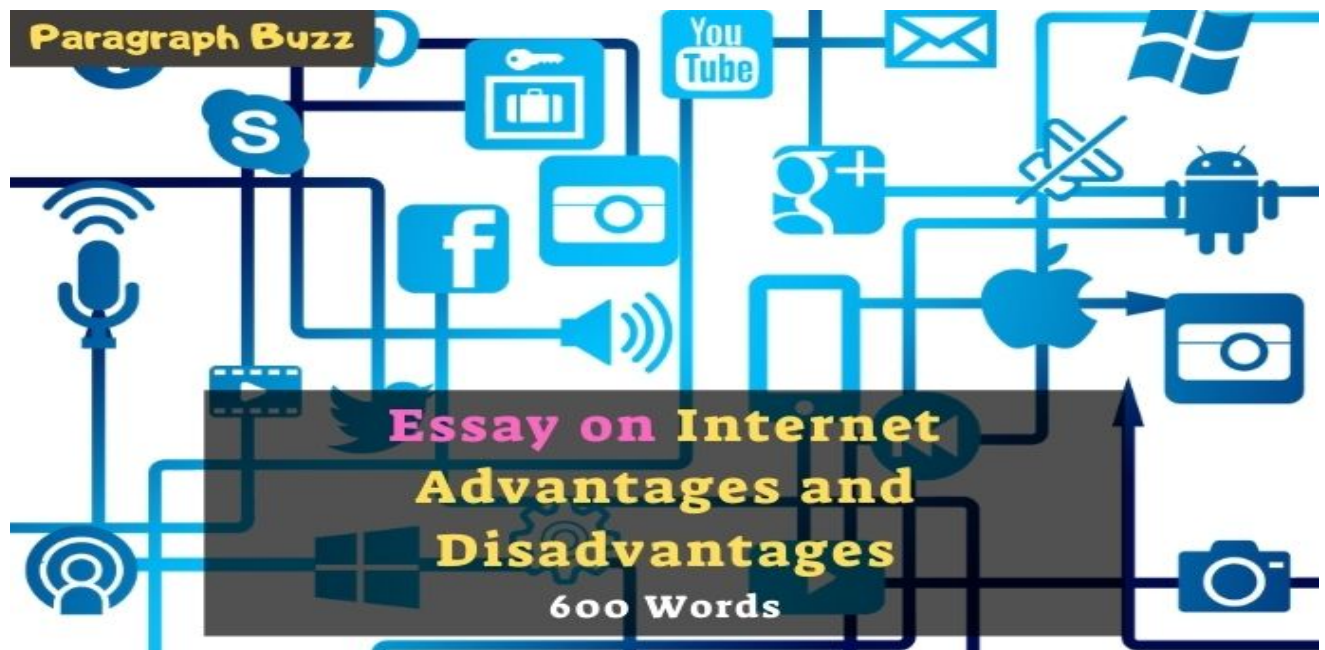

Playing a video game is good, but playing it too much can become a reason for depression and mental sickness. You have to experience different types of extreme things that you don't want to see. It has a very bad impact on the mind and mental health.

It decreases the lack of real connection with people slowly. It isolates a person from society, sometimes they even isolate themselves from their own family. It is a very bad practice for someone's health. That's why everybody should limit the use of the internet.

Conclusion:

If you can use the internet for a good reason then you will get many benefits. That's why we have to spread awareness about internet use.
